Sony selects Kobo to bring its eBookstore to Sony's Reader, tablet and smartphone book lovers in UK, Germany and Austria

Sony's Reader Store, together with Kobo, a global leader in eReading, today announced that Kobo will provide Sony's Reader™, Xperia™ tablet and smartphone users in the United Kingdom, Germany and Austria with Kobo's world-class catalogue of more than 4 million eBooks and magazines. Sony's Reader Store customers will transfer to the Kobo ecosystem starting in June.

The free top-ranking Kobo eReading app will be pre-loaded on select Sony smartphones and tablets and current customers can simply download the app from Google Play. Timing and availability may vary by market and network.

Sony's Wi-Fi® Reader devices, PRS-T1, PRS-T2 and PRS-T3, will also harness the wide variety of content available via the Kobo eBookstore. Reader Store customers will receive an email in June from Kobo with instructions on how to easily transfer their supported eBook library files to a Kobo account. Until that time, Sony's customers will continue to have full access to purchase new releases and popular bestsellers from Sony's Reader Store. Following the transfer process, Reader Store will close on 16th June.
